Library closure extended through May 31

Following the guidance of public health officials, the Wilsonville Public Library will extend its closure through May 31, 2020.

Due dates for library materials have been extended through May 31.

No overdue fines will accrue during this time, so feel free to hold on to your checked out items.

However, if you are able to do so in a safe manner, we ask that you bring your finished library materials back to the library. This will make the library's reopening easier by 'flattening the curve' of returned items.

Behind the scenes at the library

Staff have been busy conducting an inventory of all library shelves and finding items that were not checked in, or that even belong to other libraries.

New audiobooks and print books continue to arrive, which means after a quarantine of the boxes, the new items then go through our usual processing and then on to the shelves.

We have also added more items to our digital e-book and e-audiobook collections, and are working to provide online videos and magazines.

A committee of staff from each department are considering the different ways we could adjust the library layout to provide a safe space for library users to use the library at assorted stages of library service levels when we reopen.

Summer Reading Program plans are undergoing big changes. Staff are developing an 'all ages' reading log. New this summer: an online component for participants to track their reading.
